Mr NEWBURY: Thank you. Perhaps if you do not mind, either yourself or if I can direct it to the Secretary, can I have a breakdown of funding being provided to each of the boards listed on page 82, on notice, and also how much has been spent by each board to date, if that is okay, Secretary.

Mr LEANE: I can jump in there. We are happy to supply a breakdown of projects that have been funded by the revitalisation board. Given that this is a new round of funding, we need to respect that those boards are made up of volunteers of, as I said, high-level people from the community, and they will have to determine how the funding announcement in this budget will be best utilised in those suburbs. So we will not be able to forecast at this point what they are going to try to utilise that funding for, but we can give a breakdown on spending in all the projects that have happened from last year's funding, and I am happy to do that.

Mr HIBBINS: Yes. Okay. Thank you, Minister. I think previously we have discussed the 20-minute cities. I understand your office oversees that particular project. I understand you did some pilot projects—or are they underway? Have they been completed? And then what is the next step for 20-minute cities—or 20-minute neighbourhoods, I should say?

Mr LEANE: Yes, 20-minute neighbourhoods. Yes, we did discuss this in the last Public Accounts and Estimates Committee, and I do appreciate and understand your interest in this. We have done some really good work with the metropolitan partnerships in that we went for a period of time where everyone was actually within 20 minutes of their house, whether they appreciated it or not. So I think that there were a lot of learnings that we took from that. And I think that we have had some really good advice from the metropolitan partnerships when it comes to what should be available for someone within 20 minutes of their house. I have spoken about it before: recreation, particularly parks and other facilities that are really important. The suburban shopping strips became very important, and we are doing work around that too. We have already done some work in another program about improvements to shopping strips; you know, it seems to be a pretty popular request. Particularly some of these shopping strips look very tired, but once there is a bit of work done they just take on a whole new atmosphere and get a lot more people actually using them, which is important to that 20-minute neighbourhood aspect. Can I take it on notice in relation to the completion of those trials? I will get that to you as soon as possible.

Answer:

20-minute neighbourhoods are one of the seven outcomes of Plan Melbourne 2017-2050 led by the Minister for Planning.

The Department of Environment, Land, Water and Planning (DELWP) led three 20-minute neighbourhood pilots at Strathmore, Sunshine West and Croydon South, in partnership with the relevant councils. My department worked very closely with DELWP on these pilots and provided funding towards projects in each of the three pilots.

The projects funded by my department and DELWP are complete.

The 20-minute neighbourhood pilot program provided key insights for the development of the Our Suburbs: Living Local program that received $24.7 million in funding in the 2022-23 State Budget.
