

“It is likely that people have become accustomed to the milder winters of recent years, and hence what they experience as normal and below normal has altered. Similar long-term trends are evident across all Australian States as a result of the steady warming trend since the middle of last century. We know that animals and plants respond to these changes, for example by altering their time of flowering. It is likely that humans also become accustomed (one might say ‘adapted’) to the milder conditions.”
<http://www.bom.gov.au/climate/updates/articles/a012-winter-2015.shtml>

Climate Emergency: Call for a Government of National Unity

Issue greater than party / greater than constitution / National Security Act of 1939
/precipitated by a series of climate influenced extreme weather events – heatwaves, bushfires, floods, droughts

What might it entail tight banking controls, conscription, censorship of some news organisations, criminal charges against some organisations and individuals, public education (propaganda!) on a massive scale, aid & assistance to undeveloped countries, reforestation on a massive scale, rationing of certain objects

“What I have to do is to see, at any rate, that I do not lend myself to the wrong which I condemn.” Thoreau On Civil Disobedience

The Nationals deputy leader Barnaby Joyce has spoken out about the huge proposed Coal mine on the Liverpool Plains. He claims he has done everything he can to oppose it. Has he resigned from cabinet, from his parliamentary seat? Not quite. Is the National Party a party for big miners or for farmers? [separate article? / parliamentary responsibility - loyalty – to the electorate or the party]

For a ‘level playing field’ subsidies withdrawn from one industry should be withdrawn from all. It remains an indisputable fact that the fossil fuel industry still receives huge subsidies. If one person living within 1km of a proposed windfarm can stop its development then the same should apply to coal mines and gasfields. [OMIT THIS PARA]