To whom it may concern,

the legalisation of cannabis has done wonders for the economies and legal systems of numerous States in the United States. The jobs that are created and the increased tax revenues associated with the regulation and sale of cannabis and related products have had tremendous positive impacts on local economies. In the current Covid-19 environment and State and Federal governments seeking ways to kickstart economies and deliver local jobs the legalisation of cannabis is a low-risk, high impact opportunity to create a new sustain-able industry.

With legalisation comes reductions and the refocusing of resources required for law enforcement. These resources can then focus on greater detriment substances such as 'Ice', heroin, and others.
