The use of case studies from other countries that have already legalized cannabis provide enough information regarding how to implement these changes and what to expect from the public. There are also numerous studies regarding crime rate and illicit drug use diminishing after its legalization. Education regarding the benefits for mental health, safe use and the possible affects of cannabis on an undeveloped brain should be readily available to help remove the stigma around the drug in the general public. This would also encourage safe practice and help restrict underage users which is where the only negative side affect can occur.
