

[REDACTED]

From: Peter Olney [REDACTED]
Sent: Thursday, 1 October 2015 9:58 AM
To: SARC
Subject: Submission relating to "No Jag - No Play" legislation.

Dear Committee members,

In the Commonwealth of Australia there is a known constitutional right we can choose what is put into our bodies - food, medicines, vaccines, etc..
Equally, there is non-discrimination legislation which prevents discriminatory actions by people and by government - as the Crown.
To cause a part of the population - albeit children - to be discriminated against because they do not have a vaccination is completely wrong.

Considering some people know there is fault/flaws in the vaccination itself, as some toxic material is harmful to the body, then it is responsible to NOT vaccinate.
To cause parents to vaccinate their children by this sort of government coercion so that they can play with other vaccinated children is in the height of distaste.
Equally, to cause some children to not be able to share in government and/or private schools because they are not vaccinated causes disparity in government evenhandedness.

Since government is supposed to be caring for all citizens equally from a constitutional point of view, and to do that without bias towards one or other group, then the proposed legislation is totally unacceptable.

Yours sincerely,
Peter Olney
[REDACTED]