7 HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNORS SPEECH—Mr Speaker reported that the House had, that day, attended His Excellency the Governor in the Legislative Council Chamber, when His Excellency was pleased to make a Speech to both Houses of Parliament, which speech was as follows:

Mr President and Honourable Members of the Legislative Council;

Mr Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly

In this its sixth year of office, I should like to present a summary of my Government’s intentions and aspirations for Victoria.

It is now five years since the people of Victoria entrusted to my Government the responsibility of assuring the future of this State.

It was then, and it remains, a great responsibility, for this is a crucial time—a watershed—in Victoria’s history.

It is a time of unprecedented economic change—in the world at large, and of necessity in Australia.

It is on the calibre of our response to these changes that Victoria’s future depends.

The planning and co-ordination of that response is the prime task of my Government. In the context of past and contemporary events, it might well be called an historic task.

Five year ago, Victoria was performing poorly in a national economy which itself was far from impressive.

It is apparent that Victoria had stumbled into the modern economic era still burdened by the baggage of an earlier one—those days when it was possible to think that this nation rode on the sheep’s back, and on what could be dug out of the ground.

Most believed that wool and minerals would provide the export revenue we needed and protection would secure our jobs.

Manufacturing industry continued to creak behind the tariff wall. Manufacturing had no future, just a continuing existence.

So rapid have the economic changes been, and so manifest the lessons—so threatening are the consequences of failure to come to grips with them—Australians have suddenly learnt that they must change their attitudes.

Reform can only be effective however when contemporary realities are properly understood.

My Government set out to understand those realities—its reforms therefore address them.

It seeks to redress injustice where it presently exists, and equally to take the maximum advantage of all those opportunities which a rapidly changing world presents.

It seeks, in other words, nothing less than a humane and prosperous society: an enlivened, modern society.

No Government could have a greater challenge: in the last five years it has set Victoria on a new course.

Victoria now leads the economic recovery which has been occurring in Australia.

The statistics which underline this fact have a significant social meaning. In the first place they mean that far more Victorians have jobs than might have been expected a few years ago.

Victorians are now enjoying the benefits of increased investment, industrial expansion and diversification, and overall economic growth.

While my Government takes pride in its achievements it recognizes that further tasks lie ahead and with them opportunities which must be seized.

A fundamental challenge will be to encourage exports and create growth based on Victoria's competitive strengths. These include the greater use in industry of our intellectual capacities and the realization of the potentialities of new technology.

My Government recognizes that neither Victoria nor Australia can compete with the major economies across the board: but by identifying our strengths and concentrating on their development the industries of this State can significantly increase the volume of our value-added exports and therefore our general wealth.

This lies at the heart of the Economic Strategy. At its periphery lie a variety of essential measures to ensure its success.

For my Government the Economic Strategy demands a much stronger emphasis on the development and dissemination of new technologies, and on improving the knowledge and skills of the Victorian workforce.

The specific challenges are numerous:

- The first, undoubtedly, is the development of an adaptable and durable manufacturing industry, capable of taking advantage of export opportunities created by deregulation of the financial system. Opportunities for a resurgent manufacturing industry have not been better for thirty-five years.

To this end the Government has pursued a range of measures to facilitate private sector development. The task goes well beyond maintaining cost competitiveness. Success will depend on expanded and innovative use of new technology, design, quality control, marketing, and reliable and effective distributive networks. My Government will take further strides to reduce the burden of unnecessary government regulation.

- There remains the necessity to maintain good industrial relations particularly at a time when there are pressures for wage increases and greater flexibility in the arbitration process. Restraint in both prices and incomes is required to hold back inflation and improve further our international competitiveness.
- My Government takes pride in Victoria's now flourishing tourist industry. The natural environment of this State was recognised early as one of its advantages. The adjustment to the value of the dollar and an extensive promotional campaign, within Australia and overseas, have seen tourism become one of Victoria's most significant industries. It remains to build on this promising base.
- Victoria's rural industries continue to be our largest export earners. The Government is aware of the special needs of the rural community at a time when world trade conditions and the policies of some of our competitors are creating serious difficulties—particularly among cereal and dairy producers.

While recognizing that the solution to the problems of rural Victoria is largely out of its hands, my Government believes that much can be done by a continuing search for new products and markets and by sparing no effort to achieve precise and reliable delivery.

- The Government will continue to seek more equitable arrangements for grants to the States. It recognizes that present arrangements, when combined with a restrained federal budget, will increase budgetary problems for Victoria.

In addition to these demands there remains the task of ensuring that the difficulties created by economic change are moderated for ordinary men and women.

My Government is aware that current restraints imposed on the community by our changed position in the world economy have frequently been borne by those least able to pay. It is aware that for many prices have increased more rapidly than disposable income. My Government offers the assurance that its efforts are governed by an appreciation of public needs, and by a determination consistently to seek ways to advance the cause of social justice.

My Government believes that the surest guarantee of social well being is economic health.

To this end its Economic Strategy seeks the means of developing a modern and dynamic society capable of delivering prosperity to Victorians in the 1990s and beyond.

Above all, my Government is intent on growth in employment.

It believes there is nothing so unfair, and nothing so socially destructive as widespread unemployment.

The imperative to create employment has created other imperatives.

Some which I have mentioned demand economic and administrative reforms and initiatives.

These reforms are essential to our economic future and, my Government believes, equally essential to our notions of social justice.

My Government has taken steps to improve the efficiency of government services, both in their dealings with the general public and with business.

It holds strongly to the view that the consequences of inefficiency are personal and social as well as economic.

It will continue its campaign to eliminate bureaucratic obstruction, and delays in processing and delivery.

The Courts Modernization Program, which was commenced three years ago, serves as an example of my Government's efforts. Among other results achieved by this program, the average delay in Magistrates' Courts has been reduced from ten months to eleven weeks. Numerous other reforms will soon result in vastly improved efficiency and accessibility to court services for the profession, the police and the public.

My Government's pursuit of social justice in Victoria is a continuing commitment. In a good society enterprise abounds and is rewarded. Compassion—manifest compassion for the underprivileged—is also a hallmark of any good society.

Without it—despite current fashions—far from creating a modern society we create a backward one.

The decision to adopt a Social Justice Strategy arises from the Government's determination to harness the resources of the State in a systematic way, according to a planned schedule, and with all government agencies working towards clearly specified objectives.

My Government's first term of office saw work proceed on two fronts—a comprehensive review of social policies and community services was undertaken.

This has created an invaluable repository of information and advice from which concrete programs can be implemented.

Major legislation has been enacted—including WorkCare, Occupational Health and Safety Provisions, the expansion of Legal Aid, the reform of Adoption Legislation and the expansion of Public Rental Housing.

In the Government's second term of office the initiative has been maintained with the Youth Guarantee, legislation to extend the rights of the mentally ill and the intellectually disabled, and the introduction of greater financial protection for older people entering retirement villages.

At present the most comprehensive review ever undertaken of government activity in Victoria is underway.

All government agencies are being required to pursue the goals of Social Justice.

These necessarily include fair, efficient, accessible services, the protection of citizens' rights, and the extension of the individual's democratic right to influence decisions which affect him or her.

Four major priorities have been established in the pursuit of social justice. These are:

- Children in poverty
- Long term unemployment
- Dignity and security for the aged
- Human rights.

My Government has established several other priorities.

The introduction of public transport to areas previously unserved is one such.

During this financial year, significant improvements involving some 500 000 bus kilometres have been introduced to the Greensborough, Frankston and Werribee neighbourhoods. And there will be further major extensions in the immediate future.

Housing is another priority. In 1986–87 the Government will achieve 3100 housing handovers well on the way to its target figure of 12 000 in four years.

Home ownership assistance has been increased by 13·8 per cent in 1986–87, to 98·2 million dollars.

My Government believes that matters of social justice are properly the concern of community groups, commerce and industry, unions and other institutions. It calls on them to join the Government in its efforts.

My Government does not believe that spending alone is the solution to welfare. It believes instead that welfare programs must be undertaken with the same attention to rational analysis and detail, the same eye to imaginative solutions, the same long term view, as every other area of government policy.

In housing, health and welfare—as in education, transport and other public sector enterprises—the Government recognizes that there are myriad legitimate claims but no simple solutions.

My Government's aims are long term. In a number of cases they involve thoroughgoing overhauls of outdated bureaucratic machinery, the wholesale restructuring of operations in essential services, a complete re-definition of governing ideas and practices.

My Government will soon announce its Conservation Strategy.

The Conservation Strategy represents the first effort in Victoria's history to develop a philosophy and a program to protect and enhance our natural and cultural heritage. It recognizes the interdependence of development and conservation.

With this strategy the Government seeks to enhance the quality of life in Victoria by providing a better environment in which to live.

Equally it seeks to promote sustainable, environmentally sensitive economic development and to provide opportunities for new, safe and stimulating jobs. It builds on the Government's excellent record in the past four years in increasing national and State parks by 36 per cent from 4.3 to 5.9 per cent of Victoria and by opening parks to people.

The Conservation Strategy recognizes eight major priorities:

- restoring the land
- ensuring the survival of flora and fauna
- protecting forests
- reviving rivers, coasts and wetlands
- wise use of resources
- enhancement of our cities
- control of pollution and hazardous chemicals
- environmental education and community involvement

My Government has embarked on a course which will protect and improve the environment and the lives of all Victorians, while raising the level of public awareness, understanding and appreciation of the world we live in and the heritage we share.

The Government is confident that by the end of the century Victoria will have reversed the trend towards the extinction of many native flora and fauna.

More visible will be rejuvenated waterways and the rehabilitation of land affected by salinity and soil erosion.

The Conservation Strategy is a major turning point in the treatment of our natural and cultural heritage which will benefit generations well beyond the present one.

The Government's initiatives relating to the Economic Strategy, the Social Justice Strategy and the Conservation Strategy will be matched by a considerable Legislative Program which it is my pleasure to outline.

- A Bill to provide protection to victims of domestic violence and a civil law remedy separate from any criminal law sanctions.
- The reintroduction of a Bill which though not attempting to equate de facto relationships with marriage, will ameliorate the present harsh operation of the common law in relation to persons living in de facto relationships.
- A Bill to change the law following the Nieuwenhuysen Report. After considering the recommendations of the report and the wide response to it, my Government now intends to introduce new liquor legislation in this Parliamentary session.

It has accepted the responsibility to reduce the abuse and misuse of alcohol in the community. The forthcoming legislation will strongly support the Government's recent initiatives on this matter.

The legislation will provide simpler licensing procedures with a substantial reduction in the number of licence and permit categories. Administrative changes to the licensing process will eliminate some requirements which are no longer appropriate to the needs of the industry or the community.

The new legislation will also remove overlapping regulations between the Liquor Control Commission and other Government agencies.

- A Bill to provide for a more modern and progressive system of local government, including greater local powers, responsibility and accountability. It will bring this tier of Government closer to the local community and ensure it is more responsive to their needs.
- A Bill to provide for a new system of classification of all land held by Government in Victoria and mechanisms for the transfer of land between categories.
- The reintroduction of a Bill providing for the first overhaul of Victoria's planning laws since statutory planning was introduced in 1944. The Bill establishes a single planning scheme and two discretionary planning approval processes—permits, and amendments to schemes. The Bill seeks to emphasize environmental, social and economic considerations in planning matters.
- The reintroduction of a Bill to provide access to simple and inexpensive means of resolving planning disputes by creating a Planning Division of the Administrative Appeals Tribunal.
- The reintroduction of a Bill to abolish the grand jury procedure, thereby preventing private individuals from by-passing the Director of Public Prosecutions in instituting criminal proceedings.
- The reintroduction of a Bill to establish an office to conciliate and review complaints about health organizations, institutions and professionals. This office will not only assist consumers and providers to resolve complaints about health services but will also monitor complaints, analyse data and recommend improvements to health service provision.
- The reintroduction of a Bill to provide for the delcaration of six new national parks and changes to the boundaries of five others. This Bill reflects my Government's policy of expanding the system of parks and conservation reserves to ensure that samples of all Victoria's ecosystems of national significance are permanently reserved for the benefit of all future generations.
- The reintroduction of a Bill to implement the major recommendations of the Miller Report on shop trading anomalies and penalties and to introduce a new system of shop registration and classification.

The Bill will ensure that:

- consumers have adequate access to the goods they require;
- a diverse and competitive retail system is developed;
- special provisions are available for holiday and tourists areas and for special events; and
- that retailers and employees have a fair and equitable regulatory framework for the industry.

Mr Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly:

- A Supply Bill to make provision for ongoing Government expenditure for the first four months of the financial year 1987-88 will be presented to you during the present sittings of Parliament.

Mr President and Honourable Members of the Legislative Council:

Mr Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly:

As my Government approaches the commencement of its sixth year in office it remains resolved to press on with the comprehensive program of reform I have outlined.

My Government takes satisfaction from its achievements. It recognizes that many obstacles remain, and that its ambitions will at times be frustrated by circumstances beyond its control.

But my Government believes Victoria is now well and truly embarked on a new course that will take it well prepared into the 1990s.

My Government does not subscribe to the view that by any single stroke our economic and social trials will go away.

More than that, my Government believes that simplistic solutions would betray the hopes and aspirations of past generations of Australians, and the security of future ones.

It rejects also the demands of narrow, sectional interests, where those interests are incompatible with the overall interest of the community.

In pursuit of its goals the Government sees no alternative to the comprehensive strategies it has evolved and the hard work and attention to detail they entail.

I now formally open this Parliament and pray that the guidance of Almighty God may attend on your deliberations.

J. DAVIS McCAUGHEY
Governor of Victoria

Amendment No. 1 makes it mandatory for compensation to be paid where a person surrenders a prohibited weapon to the registrar.

Amendment No. 2 provides that compensation payable shall be not less than the market value of the prohibited weapon.

These amendments have been suggested by the Council and it is necessary, therefore, to refer to the terms of the Constitution Act relating to these provisions.

Although the power to suggest amendments is contained in section 64, it is not permissible for the Council to suggest any omission or amendment, the effect of which will be to increase any proposed charge or burden on the people.

I am of the opinion that these suggested amendments have that effect and that the Legislative Council has exceeded its constitutional powers.”

New section 30A inserted in Superannuation Act 1958.

3. After section 30 of the Superannuation Act 1958, insert—

WorkCare benefits to be taken into account.

'30A. (1) In this section "Current equivalent of the salary on retirement", in relation to a contributor to whom a pension is payable under section 68, means such salary as the Board from time to time determines as, having regard to general increases in salary that have occurred since the date on which the contributor became entitled to a pension under section 68, being equivalent at any relevant time to the salary that was payable to the contributor immediately prior to that date.

(2) Despite anything to the contrary in this Act, if a contributor who retires or is retired on account of disability or who becomes entitled to a pension under section 68 is entitled under this Act to a pension of an amount which together with the amount of any weekly payment of compensation under the Accident Compensation Act 1985 to which the contributor is entitled exceeds the current equivalent of the salary on retirement of the contributor, the pension payable under this Act must be reduced by an amount equal to the amount of that excess.

(3) For the period that a contributor's pension is reduced under sub-section (2) the amount payable by the Treasurer into the Fund in respect of that contributor must be reduced in the same proportion that the pension payable under this Act by virtue of sub-section (2) bears to the pension that would have been payable had sub-section (2) not been enacted.'

No. 3—MEDICAL TREATMENT BILL—New clause AA.

Agents and guardians.

“AA. (1) An agent or guardian may only refuse medical treatment on behalf of a person if—

- (a) the medical treatment would cause unreasonable distress to the person; or
- (b) there are reasonable grounds for believing that the person, if competent, would consider that the medical treatment was unwarranted.

(2) A person may provide for decisions about medical treatment to be made after he or she becomes incompetent by appointing another person as his or her agent.

(3) The appointment may be by way of—

- (a) an enduring power of attorney (medical treatment); or
- (b) a provision in an enduring power of attorney given under the Instruments Act 1958 to the same effect as Schedule 2.

(4) An appropriate order may be made under the Guardianship and Administration Board Act 1986 providing for decisions about medical treatment of a represented person to be made by the person's guardian.

(5) If the appointment takes the form of an enduring power of attorney (medical treatment) under sub-section (3) (a)—

- (a) it must be in the form of Schedule 2 and witnessed by two persons other than the agent to be appointed; and
- (b) it takes effect if and only if the person giving the power becomes incompetent.

(6) If a person gives a power of attorney in relation to medical treatment, the power revokes any earlier power given in relation to medical treatment.

(7) The person who makes an appointment under sub-section (3) (a) or (b) may revoke it in the manner provided in section 116 of the Instruments Act 1958.

(8) If a medical practitioner and another person are each satisfied that a person's agent or guardian has been informed about the nature of the person's current condition to an extent that would be reasonably sufficient to enable the person, if he or she were competent, to make a decision about whether or not to refuse medical treatment generally or of a particular kind for that condition and that the agent or guardian has appeared to understand that information, the agent or guardian may on behalf of that person—

- (a) refuse medical treatment generally; or
- (b) refuse medical treatment of a particular kind—

for that condition.

(9) Where a refusal is made by an agent or a guardian, a refusal of treatment certificate must be completed in the form of Schedule 3.

(10) If an agent or guardian completes a refusal of treatment certificate and his or her appointment as agent or guardian is later revoked, that refusal of treatment certificate is also revoked.”
